than himself. WANAMAKER is one of the highest officers in the land. He was appointed by a President for whose election WILLIAM MAHONE worked and voted last year, and who before the appointment was made was no doubt consulted by the Oily Gammon at the head of the Post-Office Department. The same WANAMAKER, backed by the same President, has turned out of office in this State a large number of postmasters and appointed in their places adherents and supporters of MARONE. Do not these facts tell every Virginian that it is his duty to rally to PHIL. McKINsex's standard? If MAHONE and all the other southern leaders would protest against the wrongs constantly being perpetrated upon the South by the Administration these wrongs would at once cease. It is because southern Republican leaders egg on Wanamakka and Harrison that these men continue their wicked work. The Sheltering Arms. [For the Dispatch.]

For the last six months there has been at work in this city a charity so unobtrusive that perhaps many of our benevolent citizens are unaware of its existence, aithough help given in many quarters has already brought many inquiries. The Sheltering Arms was established through the exertions of some of our Christian women who had long seen and felt the great need of a city hospital, and who had made every effort to procure an appropriation for one in vain. The object in view was to provide some aid and shelter in siekness for the respectable unfortunate, who otherwise would have no refuge but the almshouse. At last the large building formerly known as the Clifton House, on Fourteenth street, and owned by Dr. Booth, of James City county, was secured on advantageous terms, put in thorough repair at considerable outlay, a matron installed, and in March its doors were opened. Since then the Sheltering Arms have been extended wherever help could be given. The insane and those afficted with contagious disorders alone are excluded for obvious reasons. Its cases have ranged through all ages and conditions—from the little child of a mother dying in the almshouse, sheltered until a home could be found, to the young man For the last six months there has been at
